Master the Psychology-Backed 30-Second Opening Framework

THE SPARTAN 30-SECOND OPENING

"Hi [Name], this is [Your Name] with [Hospice Company]. I know you're incredibly busy caring for patients, so I'll be brief. We partner with facilities like yours to ensure patients receive optimal comfort care at the right time. Do you have 30 seconds?"

Why This Works:

- Acknowledges their time constraints immediately (builds respect)
- Focuses on patient outcomes, not sales (aligns with their mission)
- Requests minimal commitment (lowers resistance)
- Opens door for deeper conversation

TIER 1 DISCOVERY QUESTIONS

Use these questions to understand their current situation and identify opportunities:

1. "How many patients in your facility would you estimate are appropriate for hospice comfort care?"
2. "What does your current referral process look like when a patient becomes appropriate?"
3. "Who else is typically involved in those care transition decisions?"
4. "What challenges do you face in identifying appropriate patients early enough?"

TIER 2 DEEP DISCOVERY QUESTIONS

1. "What would it mean for your facility if you could identify appropriate patients 2 weeks earlier?"
2. "How does late hospice referral impact your readmission rates and family satisfaction scores?"
3. "What percentage of your patients who pass away were receiving hospice services?"

SPARTAN OBJECTION FRAMEWORK

OBJECTION: "We already have a hospice partner"

"I respect that relationship. Many of our best partners work with multiple hospice providers to ensure coverage and options for families. What criteria do you use when a family requests a specific provider?"

OBJECTION: "Not interested right now"

"I understand completely. The reason I called is that many facilities discover they have patients who could benefit from earlier hospice conversations. Could I send you a 2-minute assessment tool? No obligation—just something that might be helpful."

OBJECTION: "I don't have time"

"That's exactly why I called—to help save you time in the long run. Our partners tell us we've reduced their hospice-related administrative burden by 40%. Can we schedule a focused 15-minute call next week when it's more convenient?"

Ø=Ü; SPARTAN PRINCIPLE

Never argue with an objection. Acknowledge, pivot to value, and offer a low-commitment next step. Discipline in your response builds trust.
