Account Tiering Worksheet

Invest Your Time Where It Produces the Most Results

WHY TIERING MATTERS

Time is the one resource you cannot recover. Every hour you spend at a low-potential account is an hour you did not spend at a high-potential one. Account tiering is how Spartan-trained reps make disciplined decisions about where their time goes. It removes the emotional attachment that causes reps to overinvest in accounts they like rather than accounts that will produce.

Tier your accounts monthly. The first time you do it, it takes 2 to 3 hours because you are building from scratch. After that, the monthly refresh takes 30 to 45 minutes. It is the highest-ROI planning activity you can do.

THE FOUR SCORING DIMENSIONS

Dimension 1: Current Referral Volume (1 to 5)

- 5: Regular consistent referrals, 3 or more per month
- 4: Occasional referrals, 1 to 2 per month on average
- 3: Referred at least once in the past 90 days
- 2: Referred in the past 6 months but not recently
- 1: No referrals or has not referred in more than 6 months

Dimension 2: Growth Potential (1 to 5)

- 5: High census, large eligible population, significant untapped opportunity
- 4: Good census, meaningful potential, currently underreferring relative to population
- 3: Moderate census, moderate potential, some room to grow
- 2: Limited census or limited eligible population
- 1: Fully tapped or very low potential population

Dimension 3: Relationship Strength (1 to 5)

- 5: Strong champion who actively advocates for you internally
- 4: Solid relationship with primary decision-maker, multiple contacts established
- 3: Good relationship with one contact, working on building deeper access
- 2: Introductions made but relationship is still early-stage
- 1: No meaningful relationship with any decision-maker

Dimension 4: Competitive Position (1 to 5)

- 5: Preferred provider or no significant competition at this account
- 4: Strong position with known gap in competitor's service that you can fill
- 3: Equal footing with competitor, no strong preference either direction
- 2: Competitor holds meaningful relationship advantage, but not locked out
- 1: Strongly locked by competitor with no known opening

TIER PLACEMENT BY SCORE

Tier	Total Score	Visit Cadence	Primary Objective
A Tier	17 to 20	Weekly	Deepen, expand, and maintain high referral volume
B Tier	11 to 16	Every 10 to 14 days	Advance stage and develop toward first or more referrals
C Tier	6 to 10	Monthly	Maintain presence and watch for upgrade signals
Archive	5 or below	Quarterly or remove	Minimal investment until circumstances change

RE-TIERING TRIGGER EVENTS

Re-tier an account immediately (outside of your monthly review cycle) if any of the following occur:

- A referral is received: upgrade if the account was B Tier
- A key contact leaves the account: reassess relationship strength, may downgrade
- A competitive hospice loses or gains a major advantage at the account
- The facility has a significant census change, acquisition, or leadership transition
- A service quality issue is reported at the account: immediately assess relationship strength impact
- An account that was quiet for 90 or more days suddenly becomes active: move to B Tier immediately

COMMON TIERING MISTAKES TO AVOID

- Keeping accounts in A Tier because you enjoy visiting them, not because they are producing
- Letting relationship comfort drive tier decisions instead of performance data
- Not downgrading accounts that have been in B Tier for 6 months with no stage advancement
- Failing to upgrade accounts quickly after receiving a first referral — strike while the momentum is there
- Using tier placement as a permanent label rather than a dynamic, data-driven assessment

THE HONEST CONVERSATION WITH YOURSELF

Look at your A Tier list. Ask yourself: of these accounts, how many are there because they produce results and how many are there because you are comfortable there? The accounts you are most comfortable at are not always your highest-value accounts. Discomfort is often a signal that there is untapped potential. The visit you are avoiding is probably the one you should be making first.
